What Is an NFT?

“In the real world, we have laws and deeds to prove and protect the ownership of valuable assets; in the virtual world, we now have NFTs”

An NFT is a digital asset that represents real-world objects like art, music, in-game items and videos. They are bought and sold online, frequently with cryptocurrency, and they are generally encoded with the same underlying software as many cryptos.

Although they've been around since 2014, NFTs are gaining notoriety now because they are becoming an increasingly popular way to buy and sell digital artwork.

What is the metaverse?

Science fiction writer Neal Stephenson coined the term “metaverse” in his 1992 book Snow Crash, using it to mean a computer-generated universe. It is generally understood to be a highly immersive, shared virtual world where people gather to play games, socialise and to work.

It’s also tied to the development of Web3.0, which some believe will be the next chapter of the internet’s existence – one built on blockchains that, theoretically, will democratise access and power and weaken the grip of the biggest tech companies. .

In an idealized metaverse, every single user shares a single virtual world, where items and property persist for everyone between online sessions.

What is Voted Site?

Ultimate Voted Site aims to be a crypto community platform to make cryptocurrency more accessible to the public, provide entertaining features, developments and news.

A typical token voting platform is a website that sorts listed cryptocurrencies by the number of votes. Such a simple model allows different counterparties to reach their goals. So, websites get more ads sales by generating traffic from coming and voting people. Simultaneously, projects can gain attention from the passionate crypto communities by adding their coins for free on these token voting platforms. Finally, people could detect and invest in the most promising cryptocurrencies before these assets appear on leading trackers such as CoinMarketCap and Coingecko.
